May De Sousa Seeks 'Eugenic' Spouse

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 31.—After her acquaintance with E. Arthur Holmes, a New York broker, May De Sousa, 26, a native of Portugal, asserted today that she will demand a commercial eugenic certificate from her next husband. She will apply for a divorce in Chicago next week, she says. Holmes mortgaged her house and spent $25,000 of her savings.

Girl in Disguise Wants to Join Navy

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—An applicant for enlistment as an apprentice woman asked when called for examination and admitted that she was a girl in disguise, she appeared at the recruiting station with a young man and they said they were brothers, giving their names as Charles and Bernard MacArthur of Buffalo.

ESCAPES FROM POLICEMAN ON WAY TO JAIL

After Edward S. Dowd had been held in $500 for the grand jury on a breaking and entering charge in East Cambridge today, Patrolman McKinnon attempted to take him to the jail. At the jail door the prisoner wrestled himself free, made a dash for Spring street and escaped.

Dowd and a woman, Margaret Boyd, were arrested in connection with the burglary of the home of Margaret Boyd, 150 Madison street, January 25 last. The burglar took the house and the furniture, and at dinner, they were discovered. A squad of police started in the station wagon. The house was away, declared the police, and the burglar escaped with $500 and a gold watch.

Scuttled on the charge of breaking and entering, Dowd was held in $500 as a witness. Dowd is five feet, ten inches tall. He has a light complexion, and wears a dark suit and derby hat. He has a striking nervous affection of the face.

Empress Eugenie Reported Dying

Former French Queen Once Famous Beauty.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—Empress Eugenie, widow of Napoleon III, is reported in a dying condition today at her mansion in Paris. Imperial circles are plunged in grief.

She was once renowned as the most beautiful woman in Europe. She is eighty-seven years old, and broken down physically and mentally.

Rules Embalming Is Not Essential

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Comptroller of the Treasury today ruled that embalming is not essential to the "decent burial" of sailors and soldiers. However, it is essential to the decent burial of the body of Thomas I. Coppinger, killed on the revenue cutter Chesapeake, while on duty at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915.

It was necessary to preserve the body for an autopsy.

Brave Flames to Find Girl Is Safe

At the fire that caused a $5,000 loss at the home of John A. Thompson, No. 100 Temple street, Winthrop Beach, Emma Charles Taylor and John Morris risked their lives searching for the four-year-old daughter of John Taylor. She was found safe with a neighbor.

Industrial School Boy Again Escapes

ROCKFORD, Oct. 31.—The police in nearby towns are looking for Howard A. Harkins, 17, who escaped from the State Industrial School and was reported by the Rockford police, again made his escape through the wash house at the station by walking out back door.

May Force Yoakum Off Western Road

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The AMERICAN is credibly informed that banking interests intend to oust Reuben Yoakum from all connections with the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway system.

ARTISTS, Electricians, Apartment House Superintendents, engineers, machinists, etc., etc., and other clients who advertise for all nations in the Sunday AMERICAN, and will find them.

Says Suffrage Will End Liquor Traffic

Mrs. Stevens, Head of W. C. T. U., Raps Senate Weeks.

ASHLEY PARK, N. J., Oct. 31.—"Women suffrage will end the liquor traffic, enforcement of women will mean national prohibition. Suffrage and prohibition are indissolubly linked together."

With this statement, Mrs. Lillian M. Stevens of Parkfield, Me., president of the Women's National Christian Temperance Union, pointed the way for the four weeks of the membership. Mrs. Stevens called upon her followers to prove a restoration of the temperance in the United States army.

Mrs. Stevens made a bitter attack upon the Senate for proposing that beer be sold without the prohibition of women. She said that the prohibition of women would be a disaster to the nation.

Free Woman Held for Shooting Man

Norwich, Ct., Oct. 31.—Mrs. Lillian M. Stevens, who has been on trial here for more than a week, charged with manslaughter in having shot and killed her son-in-law, Thomas Costello, was freed today, after being found not guilty by a jury, which deliberated two hours.

The shooting occurred at Mrs. Stevens' home at Ashley Park, on June 5 last. She had been drinking, and had been drinking for some time before the shooting. She was found guilty of manslaughter, but the jury recommended that she be set free.

$500,000 Trust Fund Goes to Boy of Five

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—A $500,000 trust fund held for five-year-old Harry Percival Dillie, great-grandson of Sidney Dillon, railroad president and right-hand man to Jay Gould, is being held and made available by a decree by Surrogate Fowler. The widowed mother of the boy had asked that the fund be in a trust fund for the boy's education.

Sentence Four for Restaurant Theft

Judge Fallon in South Boston today gave a three months' sentence to four men charged with creating a disturbance in the restaurant of the Hotel Hamilton, and with robbing the cash register. The men appealed and were held in $500.

The men were James W. McMichael, John Kolesky and John Barry.

REPORT JAPANESE IN SECRET NEGOTIATIONS WITH GEN. HUERTA

VERA CRUZ, Oct. 31.—Reports that Japanese officers have been conducting secret negotiations with General Huerta at Mexico City are being circulated here today. This phase of the situation, which is puzzling diplomats of the world, came to light when it was learned that a man representing himself to be the military attaché of the Japanese legation at Washington, called from here on the Ward line telephone. It is said that he had been in Mexico City for several weeks.

Great interest attaches to a conference which is to be held here tomorrow between General Huerta and the Japanese minister to Mexico. It is understood that Rear Admiral Fletcher, commander of the United States squadron, and the commander of the German squadron, Bremen and Marha, will participate together with Captain W. A. Bernaldo, the American military attaché at Mexico City.

It is believed that if aggressive action in Mexico by an outside agency becomes imminent, the United States and Germany will cooperate and use the initiative. This is the opinion of the United States government of any suggestion that intervention was intended for territorial aggrandizement.

The French Ambassador has been invited here for a conference with Mr. Lind and it is entirely possible that generalissimo Huerta will join the United States and Germany.

Herman Arellano, a follower of Felix Diaz, was arrested during the night and held in the Federal Prison under military guard. Rear Admiral, who is a native of Guatemala, has long been a follower of the fortunes of Diaz and at the time the Diaz uprising broke out he was the month Arellano was made censor of cables.

HUERTA TO CLING TO OFFICE, WHATEVER WILSON'S DEMANDS

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31.—President Huerta will reject any demand by President Wilson that he resign his post as President of Mexico. General Huerta is the least President of the republic.

This declaration of Huerta's firm stand in defiance of the wishes of the United States government was made today by a Mexican official, following the receipt of dispatches from Washington, saying that the American administration was to exercise a formal demand upon Huerta to retire.

The internal situation of the Mexican republic is becoming more serious daily. Government employees are on the verge of mutiny because they are unable to get any pay.

Thursday was the official payday, but no money was forthcoming. It is reported that the Banco Nacional was asked for a loan by the government, but refused it, saying that the French loan had given orders to advance no more money. This indicates that France will exert financial pressure to force the retirement of Huerta.

Overtures are said to have been made to leaders of the Cahuilla party to advance sufficient funds to pay the police and municipal employees.

Arrests of supporters of Felix Diaz continue. Several of them are said to have been involved by the confession of the woman who revealed the plot to assassinate Huerta.

Missing Brighton Girl Is Married

FRIDAY, OCT. 31.

WALTHAM GIRL FINDS ROBBER IN HER ROOM

Miss Patricia Endow, a nurse employed at the Massachusetts School for Public Studies in Waltham, was awakened early today to find a man in her room in the school dormitory. He was going through the bureau drawers.

The girl screamed and the man dashed out of the room. As the night watchman and nurses came to Miss Endow's assistance the man escaped to the basement.

A search was made, but the man could not be found.

Miss Endow found the contents of the bureau scattered about and her gold watch, valued at $50, missing.

She says the man was tall and of light complexion. She is sure he was not a patient or employee of the institution.

LEASTON, Governor Walsh is not the proud possessor of a paid overcoat, the Fox single tailcoat in three variations, but nevertheless Mr. Walsh is a man.

The Walsh mascot is unknown. Every morning since the campaign opened the Lieutenant-Governor has received an anonymous letter making certain suggestions.

The writer signs himself—or herself—"Well-Wisher." The penmanship is that of a person of education.

Lieutenant Governor Walsh showed several of the letters today to newspaper men. One of them, dated some days ago, began:

Dear Sir:—I have taken the liberty of sending you this morning a copy of the Atlantic Monthly for October. It contains an interesting article by J. Lawrence Laughlin, entitled "Monopoly of Labor," and a fuller treatise on "The Goal of Equality," by William Brewster Tucker. These articles may not have come under your eye, and they may interest you. Professor Laughlin treats particularly of the "minimum wage," considering it as assumed, and in the few words he gives to the anti-monopoly theory—the difference between the two is essentially "Berk at Africa."

It is evident that he does not agree with two of Mr. Gardner's theories.

Mr. Tucker is very interesting on the relative values of capital and labor in production and discusses in a manner new to me the value of labor's contribution as a basis of its social and material position.

The Lieutenant-Governor admits that he has received several helpful suggestions from "Well-Wisher," his unknown friend.

So at breakfast every morning at the Hotel Lenox, the first thing from the "Governor" is, "Letter from W. W. 'Well-Wisher'."

And Secretary "Tom" Canning produces the daily message.

After which the hands and eyes are sorted, except this morning the eyes came alone.

Women Jurors Balk at Unsavory Case

WOMAN, Wash., Oct. 31.—Suffragists received a sad blow here when a woman asked to be excused from jury duty in a certain case because the jury said there would be "unsavory" scenes. The women jurors were excused. Attorneys say men have more duty for unfortunate women in sex cases than women, but the suffragists always claimed that women jurors are vastly improve the moral standards.

Educator Opposes Studying at Home

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 31.—School children throughout the State will acclaim the idea of "learn, hear" the attack made by William Webster, a prominent educator, against studying at home, at the convention of the Rhode Island League of Education here. Mr. Webster said: "The conscientious children come here, but suffer and work till bedtime. In the lack of association with their peers may be attributed the rampant idleness for father and mother and the lack of moral influence of the family."

Speaker Beaten in Newfoundland

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Oct. 31.—Speaker Warren of the House of Assembly was defeated in the quadrennial general election yesterday by Business Manager Givens of the Fisheries' Protective Union, allied with the Opposition party headed by Sir Robert Bond. The vote was: Givens 571, Warren 607.

CUTTING the Cost

We sell clothing lower than any store in New England—quality for quality. This is not a claim founded on fiction. Here are substantial reasons why we can offer the biggest dollar's worth.

We are producers as well as retailers. With our 26 retail stores, the demand for "Boston-Made" clothes enables us to purchase woolsens in greater quantities at low prices direct from the mills. Our stupendous output is THE factor in lowering the cost per suit. By selling direct we save you middlemen's profits. These economical advantages, together with high standard of quality, style-correctness, full guarantee policy, are unmistakable proofs.

Young Men's Suits

Expressions of cost-cutting are clearly shown in our immense and varied stock of young business men's and college students' suits. Coats with narrow shoulders, slender waisted, soft roll collar, deep lapels. Trousers shaped to the youthful figure.

Tenement House Fire in New York

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—More than 150 persons who had been driven from their homes in their night clothing by an incendiary fire burned on the fire escapes on the front of the six-story tenement, No. 320 West Forty-fourth street, today, said they were rescued by men and ladders. The scantly clad refugees were seen by a cutting wind and some of them were so weak that they could hardly hold on when saved.

Found Prize Cow Nourishing Fawns

HINSDALE, Oct. 31.—Does a fawn know the difference between a doe and a cow? Well, maybe. Anyway, when William H. Frey noticed a big white cow on his farm he started to find the owner. He discovered two of the most cows nourishing two fawns. Fear that one of the fawns, and the State Game Commission, decided the killing justifiable.

Read Our Ads Forever If You Like

But remember that it's not what we say nor how we say it, but the clothes we sell and the way we sell them, that has made this Live Store such a remarkable success—that has won for it in a couple of years a larger patronage and a greater degree of public confidence than some ancient establishments have gained in as many generations.

A big business like this, operated with the advantages of low rent, without charge-account expenses and losses, and with spot-cash buying to cut down cost, can afford to give so much more value than any ordinary store that the simple truth may sound to some readers like exaggeration.

The Senate Should Carefully Consider Mr. Vanderlip's Progressive and Practical Currency Plan

The Senate should make no hasty decision in the matter of the Currency bill.

There are two distinct plans now before Congress, one involving a system of "regional" banks and the other a government central bank, with branches. If we embark on the one we cannot change to the other without difficulty and disturbance. It is important, therefore, to select the right plan.

A good deal can be said in favor of the administration's plan for "regional" banks, but the plan for a government central bank, advanced last week by Mr. Frank A. Vanderlip, is not to be dismissed as unworthy of serious consideration. The fact that it is advanced at this moment by a leading financier with large Wall Street interests should not prejudice the Senate against any of the really valuable points of this plan. It was not originated by Mr. Vanderlip. The idea of a central government bank has been expressed by the radical thought of this country for many years.

As far back as 1892 we find the Populist party—founded on the powerful Farmers and Farmers' Alliance—groping at the idea in their Omaha platform. But clearly and emphatically we find it expressed in the first national platform of the Independence party, then representing forty-four States and two Territories, adopted at Chicago in 1908, and reading:

"The Independence party declares that the right to issue money is inherent in the government, AND IT FAVORS THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A CENTRAL GOVERNMENT BANK through which the money so issued shall be put into general circulation."

Moreover, the idea has found practical expression and actual operation in other countries. The Bank of France embodies this idea; also the Reichsbank of Germany. So the idea is by no means altogether theoretical and certainly not essentially reactionary.

It is possible that the interests of which Mr. Vanderlip is a leading representative may not be altogether pleased with the Vanderlip plan. By their public utterances it may be found that they are not. Mr. Vanderlip, however, was asked by the Senate to submit what he believed to be the best possible plan of currency reform, and, being an American citizen, probably had enough pride and enough patriotism to respond sincerely to this suggestion, and to submit a plan which he honestly believed to be the best one for the country as a whole.

At any rate, Mr. Vanderlip's plan seems to be in accordance with the best progressive thought of the country and not so much in accord with the general sentiment of Wall Street. Furthermore, Mr. Vanderlip's plan is in accord with the actual experience of other countries.

Therefore, the AMERICAN urges the Senate of the United States to consider this plan carefully; to consider it not as a product of Mr. Vanderlip's mind and associations, but as a concrete expression of the plan for which through many years there has been agitation by the radicals of this country.

The AMERICAN urges the Senate to investigate the operation of somewhat similar plans in France and Germany. We cannot lightly assume that a plan which in the main is successful abroad might not be successful here. The objection made that the business to be conducted here is so much greater than the business to be conducted abroad as to make the plan unworkable here is not a sound objection. Americans are accustomed to doing business on a much larger scale than it is done abroad. They would have no difficulty in extending and adapting the principle, if it is a correct principle, to the larger business of this country.

The Vanderlip plan seems to be most practical and progressive. It is a more radical plan than the administration plan. Yet it is not so much of an experiment. A plan like Mr. Vanderlip's has been the popular ideal, and the people should not abandon their ideal simply because it has received the endorsement of a great banker, who advances a plan as the best possible one and a most practical one for the whole country.

America Leads Woman's March

The suffrage battle, which has been so magnificently fought—wisely and winningly on the American side and valiantly but indirectly on the English shores—is verging now toward its crisis throughout the world.

It is absolutely certain that the progressive woman has forced her issue into the arena of international politics and compelled the attention of not the indorsement of all nations.

Six States in successive triumph have given to woman that which England's militant suffragettes have battled for in vain, and nearly a million women today are voting in America upon the issues which make the present and the future.

It is a question of methods. The essential principle of universal suffrage is vindicated in this great republic. Woman has won her right to vote. She has won it by proven equality in the schools and by superb effectiveness and leadership in all the great movements that concern the race. America has crowned and is crowning her every day in the royalty of a deserved citizenship.

And when America, leading the world in progressive sentiment as it does today, shall practically announce that her noble women have place and power in the mighty problems of this republic, the nations of the Old World will hear and heed the solution which this great new electorate has presented for the healing of national and international ills.

The woman's cause was never so hopeful or so inspiring as it is today.

Gee! I Wonder Who Made Those?

The Price of Happiness; Only the Poor Have It The Rich Man, With All His Wealth, Cannot Buy It, Dorothy Dix Says; Friendship, Work and Love Are Beyond His Reach

By DOROTHY DIX

WHO get the most real pleasure out of life, rich people or poor people? Is happiness for sale, over the counter, like a peck of potatoes or a diamond ring, and can only those who have the price?

The other day two clerks, strong, healthy young fellows earning fairly good salaries and on the way to do better, were discussing the announcement that Mr. Vincent Astor proposed to fly down to town every morning in a hydroplane from his place up the Hudson. They were fairly shocked at the thought of a millionaire taking such risks with his precious life. It seemed almost sacrilegious to them for anybody with that much money to even take a chance at getting killed.

"Gee!" exclaimed one of the youths, "if I was as rich as he is I'd be so afraid of getting hurt I would go about in a goat cart surrounded by a steel cage. You wouldn't catch me doing any death-defying leap in a hydroplane, or aeroplane or even an automobile."

"You are right," agreed the other young man. "If I had as much to live for as he has I wouldn't even cross a street for fear of being run over by a paragonator until they had stopped traffic both ways."

Thereupon the two young men, feeling that there wasn't any particular purpose in exercising any special precaution in preserving the lives of thirty-dollar-a-week clerks, proceeded to divert themselves by riding motorcycles and engaging in other dangerous amusements in which they found the keenest enjoyment.

Poor Have the Liberty That Is Foundation of Happiness

And it never occurred to either one of them that in so doing they were depriving, in the most conclusive manner, their own consciences of the greatest pleasure that wealth brings happiness, and the more money people have the more fun they get out of living. For the more fact that we are poor enough and inconspicuous enough to do as we please without its making a particle of difference to the balance of the world, or calling for a headline in a newspaper, means liberty, which is the very foundation-stone of happiness, and that is a luxury that the poor rich man never knows.

We are continually called upon to weep over the pathetic fate of poor children whose home is the gutter. We might as well shed other tears over the lot of the multimillionaire baby whose cradle is guarded by armed detectives, whose life is regulated by a high-priced doctor, whose toys are sterilized, who has only a bowing acquaintance with his parents, and who never knows what it is to have one single hour of natural, untrammelled freedom.

Poor children are happier than rich children, and they have a better chance in life, for it is the curse of wealth that it kills ambition and noble effort. Someone said to a very rich self-made man once that he had given him no other advantage of education.

"Yes," replied the old man sadly, "every advantage but the greatest advantage of all—honesty. I couldn't give my son the chance in life I had myself."

Certainly, however, the vast majority of people believe that wealth brings happiness and that a young man as rich as Vincent Astor, say, gets more real fun out of living than most of the young men in moderate circumstances—the young man who, by his own efforts, is making a comfortable income.

How do they figure this out? Not in physical comfort. He cannot sleep in but one bed. He cannot wear but one suit of clothes at a time.

ment, thrill, never-ending interest. It is the most absorbing game on earth, and the man who gets up every morning with the knowledge that there's going to be a fresh deal of the cards, and that he's got to pit his skill and diplomacy and intelligence against the champions of his community, has got something to live for. Besides, no other people on earth, work so hard and so cheerfully as those whose sole occupation is killing time.

Want? You think it must be delightful to be known to be because you are rich? Perhaps so. If you have been poor and made the money yourself, because that means that you've fought the fight and won out. But there's nothing to be chummy about—no thrill of gratified vanity in money that you have inherited. It takes luck, and not talent, to be born with a bank book in your mouth.

Friendship? That's the choicest pleasure in life, but it's reserved exclusively for the delight of the poor. No rich man has any friends, because experience of riches and because experience has taught him to be suspicious of everybody that he trusts nobody and believes in the sincerity of no one.

Love is a Paradise from Which Cupid Bars the Rich Man

Love? A paradise from which Cupid stands with a golden sword and turns the millionaire away. No rich man may ever even hope to be loved for himself alone. He is the prey of the adventures, the excursions, the scheming woman who is willing to sell her soul for money and position. How little domestic happiness is found in these days of modern convenience that record prove.

The truth is that money doesn't buy happiness, and the man with a moderate income can get far more pleasure out of living than the millionaire can. Which is a comforting thought for the vast majority of us who are engaged in the exciting and pleasurable sport of chasing the wolf from the door.

Aurignacians Were a Race of Artists

People of Practically Unknown Period of 100,000 Years Ago Carved Wonderful
Figures on Cavern Walls

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

I was a poet—and it is perhaps fortunate for the reader that I have not the gift of rhyme and meter—I should certainly try to sing the glories of the great Aurignacian Age, when primitive man first ceased his scurrying in the production of works of art and when the human imagination began to trust its wings.

Thousands of Readers

Never Heard of Aurignacians

There are, no doubt, many thousands of readers who have never heard of those wonderful ancestors of ours, the Aurignacians. I must, then, explain who they were and when they lived.

To find them we have to go back so far that, from the point of view which they occupied, the greatness of Babylon and Egypt, with their recorded history, begins to be hidden far beneath the horizon of coming time. The space of time stretching between them and the days when Joseph was sold by his brethren into Egypt is a hundred times longer than that which separates us from the age of the Pharaohs.

History as we know it is only a little islet in the ocean of geological time, and when we have gone back to the uttermost extremity of our lost world we have hardly drawn perceptibly nearer to the immensely longer island of time that was occupied by the Aurignacians and their predecessors. It lies away off beyond the mists and the waves, invisible to the historian with his myopic eyes, but perceptible to the telescopic vision of the "prehistorian," who employs the methods of geologic science.

This distance cannot be measured in centuries, these trifling rardisties of history, and we can only say that its span covers hundreds of thousands of years. The first glacial age that have in succession swept over the earth form the Aurignacian epoch, which marks the passage of the aëria with which we have to deal when we try to penetrate the mysterious dawn of human existence on the earth. Even the Aurignacians lived far this side of the dawn. Man's first distinct separation from his ape and monkey relatives occurred probably a million years back of the Aurignacian epoch. All the vast space of intervening time was required for the slow development of his brain and the birth of his ingenuity.

But again to what I have before briefly told you about the great epoch of pre-history. First came the Aurignacian epoch, when man had not yet developed claws, and was a bestial brute, and projecting jaws revealed the feline charms of the gorilla.

Then came the Acheulian epoch, when they began, more skillfully, to chip flints for tools and weapons of the rude kind, and had become, perhaps, a little handsomer.

Then followed the Mousterian epoch, in which a little advance was made along the same lines, and a certain degree of skill in the development in the fashioning of the hand of flint into tools and weapons.

Aurignacian Epoch One of Glorious Deeds, Records Show

And then came the great Aurignacian epoch, which, in the light of recent discoveries, seems to me one of the most glorious in the entire career of humanity. The interest that our tales in it is akin to that which we feel in the first chapters of the most ancient of legends. The Aurignacian was the typical man-child. With him came primitive man changed into a modern man—the man-child became the man-thinker.

Recalls Painting Which Was Lifelike in Its Execution

I recall, particularly, a picture found in a Spanish cavern, representing nine women dancing around a lone man, and which was so manifestly conceived in a spirit of caricature that the laughter that it excited seems again to be the merry merriment that rang around it when that cavern was the home of the flint-homes that man then possessed, a very salon of art.

THE COMER

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"THE only baby in the world!" he parents both exclaimed.

"Our friends don't show their children here, because they are ashamed."

Look at the little darling! See the deep blue in his eyes! You'd never dream a child of two would be so really wise."

Come, Cecil, say some little words you cunning little tad! Say 'good' for the nice gentlemen." And Cecil answered "bad!"

"Just listen!" cried his parents, "the precious little tad! Will say at least a dozen words when nobody is here."

I don't know when he gets it from; we started talking late; he must take all his brightness from his dear old Grandmother Kate. Say 'doggie' for us darling." And Cecil nodded "lat."

"He's going to be a President," the mother proudly said.

"The little rascal seems to think at play or in his bed. His father was a stupid child. When he was two years old he couldn't make a single sound, that's what his mother told."

Now, darling, show the gentlemen how little babies play. Come, Cecil, do what babies do." And Cecil went to sleep.
